 - a) subjecting pectinous plant material to a pectin extraction in an aqueous medium to obtain a suspension comprising of a liquid phase comprising dissolved pectin and solids from the plant material;
 - b) removing the solids from the suspension to obtain a liquid material;
 - c) precipitating the pectin from the liquid material to obtain a pectin precipitate;
 - d) dissolving the pectin precipitate in an aqueous medium and cleaving the dissolved pectin with purified endo-polygalacturonase to obtain polygalacturonides; and thereafter
 - e) separating at least most of the water from the product obtained in step d) to recover a polygalacturonide preparation without using an additional separation step and without hydrolyzing any ester groups that are present.
